

Curvemeister 201: Advanced Techniques Class Expectations

As a member of the Curvemeister 201 class I would like to ask you to keep the following things in mind as we progress through the class and the materials.

- 1) This class is a self-paced class in that you are responsible for completing the necessary work and responses that are a part of the class.
- 2) You will only get out of the class what you put into the class. Some of the ideas and techniques will not be easy at first but they all have been shown to work and your success will be based on your participation.
- 3) Weekly discussion sessions will be available for you to connect with the class and the instructor. If you cannot attend a specific weekly class session look forward to the next weeks call. The weekly calls are for you to explore your images, ask questions, and share results; they provide the “personal touch” needed for some people to understand the process we are asking you to learn.
- 4) Curvemeister is a “Cruelty Free” zone. We provide constructive critique and related help. We do our best to keep nasty posts off the site and will be quick to ask you to amend or remove any posting we feel is in poor taste or judgment. Any posts we find offensive will be removed without appeal. Continued postings in that manner will be cause for removal from the class without refund and possibly being banned from the Curvemeister sites.
- 5) There are no stupid questions. There are questions that you need answers to and we will do our best to answer them without judgment. If your question is not answered please ask it again.
- 6) There is no cheating in this class! What we are saying is anything that you do that improves the images as assigned is fair game. Yes, we want you to use some of the things we are going to introduce but if you have a favorite process we want to hear about it too. It just might change our minds on a few things.

Please open your eyes, open your mind, have fun and be challenged!

Greg Groess
Mike Russell